A Terrible Affliction.—The sad news reached here Wednesdnay evening, that the wife of Hon. W. H. Wetmore, near Haskins, had been drowned in a cistern, one report stating that it was a case of audicide, and another that the drowning was the result of an accident. The report cast a gloom over the whole community, as both Mr. Wetmore and his estimable wife are well known here. Mrs. Wetmore had a genial and kind disposition, and was a devoted wife and mother, but at intervals was given to spells of unaccountable melancholty. No one could be more devoted, kind and indulgent to his family than has been Capt. Wetmore, and himself and family have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community. # WORTH HAVING A JUDICIOUS

A judicious wife, says John Ruskin, the removed philosopher of Oxford, is always nipping off from her here A judicious wife, says Jehn Ruskin, the removined philosophics of Oxford, is always nipping off from her hard-banks moral nature little twigs that are growing in wrong directions. She keeps him in shape by continued pruning. If he says of does anything silly she will affectionately remonstrate and tell him so. If he declares he will do some absurd thing she will find some way to prevent him from doing it. And by far the chief part of all the common sense there is in the world belongs unquestionably to women. The wisest things a man commonly does are those which his wife counsels him to do. A wife is a grand wiell'er of the prening knife. If Ben Johnson's wife had lived there would have been no occurric hoarding up of orange peel, no touching of all the posts in warking along the streets, no cating and drinking with disgusting voracity. If Oliver Goldsmith had been married the never would have worn that memorable and ridiculous old coat. Whenever you find a man whom you know the the about coldly dressed or talking absurdly, or exhibiting occupations, you may be some that he is not terms at College, thus securing the means to complete his education. This is the class of men who usually succeed, and we trust tle about, oddly dressed, or talking absardly, or exhibiting occentricity of manner, you may be sure that he is not a married man, for the corners are rounded off and the little ragged shoots pared away in married men. Wives have generally more sense than their husbands, even though they may be very clever men. The wife's advice is like the ballast that keens the ship on an oven keet

Gentlemen:— For years I have been agreat sufferer from Dyspepsia, and could get no relief (having tried werything which was recommended) until, arong on the advice of a friend, who had been benefitted by Bacowy's Inox Harrans, I tried a bottle, with most surprising results.
Previous to taking Brower's Hoos Birtins, everything I ate distressed me, and I suffered greatly from a burning sensation in the stomach, which was unbearable. Since taking Brown's Inox Hirrins, all my troubles are at an end. Can cat any time without any disagreeable results. I am practically another
